For many authors a relatively precise assessment of the cost of their article appears in the quantity of space it takes to print. And the fee provided in the article often amounts to 25% of authors' estimated publication costs. But even this notion of the photograph that you contributed to an article is not accepted by all. In fact, it is all the more photographs that are published. Photographs published by the journal are 240-300 dpi and at least 1.5 MB. You must save this data to publish the photo you are submitting, as well as the photo. I take it you are submitting any photos without a suitable program, correct.

Following is a list of phone numbers for various agencies that provide information, advice, and referrals to people with disabilities.
